“ Tomorrow will be one of the hardest things I've ever had to do. I will be telling my brother Barry goodbye for the last time. So many memories in so many things that we had done together. When we were younger mom said that we should have been twins because we were never separate. I remember him holding my hand when we would cross the street so that I would be safe. He was with me on my first date when I turned 16. Growing up we spent many hours fishing and just being outdoors. He was always there when I needed him and hopefully I was always there when he needed me. I can't begin to tell you the pain that I feel for losing him he was not only my brother he was my best friend growing up. Later on in the years as we got older we still were there for each other still protecting each other. Every night he would call me to tell me good night and every Saturday night he would call me to tell me that chicken man was on. Svengoolie was our favorite show on Saturday night. But he always called it chicken man. I have not been able to watch the show ever since he's gotten sick and unable to call me to tell me it's on I'm not sure I'll ever be able to watch it again. I don't know if I can do this without you by my side tomorrow but you will always be in my heart . I know that God is taking care of you now and that you are safe and pain-free. And you are probably setting along a river bank fishing with our brother Mike and our brother Nate and Dad and Mom. So many stories in me about the times that we had together and as the years go by I will try the share them with your daughter Pam. Goodbye my brother I love you, your sister Pam
