“ Adam and myself worked together on many Wiegand projects. We were always in sink. It was like we knew what each other was thinking. Anybody knows this is paramount when your work is as physical demanding as carpenter's are. He also was a great problem solver. It never took him long to find a solution to any problems we may encounter. I never had a real brother, but if I would have a choice of one Adam would be the one. The one thing that really stood out from this Christen man was his love for his family.
